CHESTER EMPHATIC IN REFUTING COOK

Discrepancies in Doctor's Statement miles to the north pole." Regarding Position of Sun Cited by the Admiral to Show that Brooklyn Beyond Eighty-two Degrees.

Scientists in this city yesterday were discussing the speech made Saturday night by Rear Admiral Colby M. Chester, U. S. N., retired, at the University Club, in which he characterized Dr. Frederick A. Cook as a "faker," and declared

The importance of Admiral Chester's accusation lies not only in the fact that he is an eminent astronomical authority and was formerly superintendent of the and was formerly superintendent of the United States Naval Observatory, but in that he was one of the special subcomtional Geographic Society to examine the records of Commander Peary and report on his claim to polar discovery. The subcommittee declared Peary had reached the pole.

Others Declined to Talk.

Prof. Willis L. Moore, president, and O. P. Austin, secretary of the society, declined to discuss Admiral Chester's speech. They took the ground that it would be improper for them to talk about it, because both Commander Peary and Dr. Cook were members of the society.

"My speech last night," Admiral Chester said, "was informal and extempora neous. I had been in New York for about a week and was called up on the long narrative, but that on the four subsequent days and presumably on all subsequent days, Dr. Cook was headed south away from the pole, which, according to his own accounts, was at least 225 miles away. Admiral Chester based this deduction, he said, on Dr. Cook's statement that on April 3 the sun sank just below the horizon and that four days later, on

Did Not Travel North.

According to Admiral Chester, if Dr. Cook had been traveling northward during those four days his change in location, combined with the steadily increasing declination of the sun, would in four days have caused a far greater change zon than that reported by Dr. Cook. "If it really took, as Dr. Cook said, ur days for the sun to change its midnight position from just below the horizon to just above it." Admiral Chester continued, "the only explanation possible is that Dr. Cook's movements were taking him away from the midnight sun; in other words, to the south. The point wish to make is that the sun during these four days was getting above the orizon at an appreciable rate each day If Dr. Cook were going to the north, this rate would have been increased still furher. But such an increase would rehange mentioned.

"I therefore state," Admiral Chester said in conclusion, "that Dr. Cook never BASES ARGUMENT ON FACTS got beyond 82 degrees just beyond Cape Thomas Hubbard, and that he then started back south. My conclusion is that Dr. Cook never got closer than 564
